A General Cleaning Up.

The clean city crusade instituted by Commissioner West and begun today by the Healt. Department ought to recommend itself to every cleanliness which Washington has long boasted out front. Not the streets alone, but the alleys, back refuse if sanitary conditions here

In the accomplishment of that result the co-operation of the citizen is essential. The health office men may enter houses, it is true, and report the failure of citizens to obey the law. But the process of compelling them to fulfill their obligations to their neighbors is at best slow and uncertain. The only effective means of keeping the Capital clean, front and back, is to persuade the householder to do his part

Ten thousand circulars have been issued by the District government inviting the attention of citizens to the need—the present urgent need—for a general cleaning up. The danger from accumulated refuse, always ger from accumulated refuse, always | days as during the hot summer months.

But today there is still more reaon than that for especial watch It is threefold: That typhoid continues to spread in space of all the precautions the health office has been able to take; that the number to be out of all proportion to the population of the city; that the death rate among infants continues to give the Capital an unenviable

Young Brownlow, Who Worked Up Case Against Her, Charged With Abusive Language.

GUTHRIE, Okla., July 24.-As a direct result of the arrest recently of Mrs.
E.aily McKinley, postmistress at Kingfisher, and three of her clerks, Joh McKinley, Miss Lizzie McKinley and Miss The engagement is announced of Miss Clara Godfrey, charges have been filed > graces of Mrs. Theodore Rousevelt, wife of the President.

The case against the McKinleys was worked up by Inspector Brownlow, who as been stationed in Oklahoma for somme. The charges he made are of attime. The charges he made are of attempting to defraud the Government, the main charge being that she paid her clerks only a part of the amount allowed by the department for clerk hire, using the balance herself in addition to her salary, which is held to be a direct violation of the postal laws. As a result of an arraignment of the defendants before a United States court commissioner, all of them walved a preliminary examination, and were held to the grand jury under a bond of $500 each.

Charges Against Brownlow.

The charges, now made against Brownow, allege that he used coercive and busive language to Mrs. McKinley and her postoffice employes. In one instance, it is charged that he threatened to place a young lady in jail if she would not sign a paper which he had prepared.

sign a paper which he had prepared. These charges were filed against Brownlow, it is said, before the arrest of the McKinleys.

Mrs. McKinley was removed from office, following the filing of Brownlow's report, and ex-Sheriff W. R. Kelly, of Kingfisher county, was appointed her successor. She was arrested by Deputy Marshal Allen Goff, a cousin of John Goff, who directs the President's hunts in Colorado. She stoutly maintains her complete innocence and declares she is being persecuted by political enemies.

Mrs. McKinley was the only woman holding a postoffice of any importance in Oklahoma, and the only one in the two Territories, excepting Miss Alice Robertson, of Muskogse, an honorary member of the Rough Rider Regiment. Her husband was a homesteader, living in Kingfisher county, when William McKinley was elected President. Although there were politicians in Kingfisher to here were politicians in Kingfisher ounty who wanted the postoffice, the President asked Congressman Dennis Plynn to allow him to make a personal ppcintment at Kingfisher, and his farmer cousin got the place.

In Husband's Place.

Before his term expired, however Postmaster McKinley died, and his widow was named his successor. She was left with a very large family to support, a mortgage on the farm, her busband's medical and fureral expenses to pay, and in addition had to care for everal children of a sister who had died recently. It was in such a condition, financially, that the widow found herself when her term as postmistress expired. In the meantime, too, President McKinley had died and Mr. Roosevelt had succeeded him. Chances for reappointment were looking blue for Mrs. McKinley, when she struck on a scheme that worked successfully, and that was placing her case before Mrs. Roosevelt, the President's wife, and petitioning her to take the matter up with the President.

Mrs. Roosevelt responded, the President was pleased to gratify her and the Kingfisher postoffice appointment for a third time was a personal matter, and Mrs. McKinley was the second time a winner. It is said that she was the only person in the United States holding an office obtained through the efforts of the President's wife.
